Financial Reward Acquired Under Deception

This 3-clock hour class will focus on the different types of fraud that are around us every day, emphasizing that we should use caution in all of our real estate transactions.

As a result of taking this class, the agent shall be able to:

1. Understand the difference between Fraud for Property and Fraud for Profit.
2. Have a better knowledge of the various types of fraud that are common to the real estate industry.
3. Have a better understanding of wire fraud and how it could happen to anyone.
4. Review actual life-stories that have occurred in our area.
5. Participate in a quiz with answers that have a full explanation.
6. Know about life-stories of local closings that had deceptive practices.

DEFINING FRAUD – WHAT IS FRAUD?

Most people think of fraud as an evil practice, but “fraud” as used in law simply means an action or lack of action that is punishable by law. Fraud is defined by the legislature and the courts. It includes outright deception, and sometimes almost “accidental” misrepresentation. In some circumstances (like investments) fraud includes failure to disclose or to tell the whole truth. Sometimes the law makes people like officers and directors, and those who assist in furthering the fraud, liable even if they did not know about the fraud.

The definition of fraud has undergone changes throughout the centuries. The courts have always been careful to avoid limiting fraud by devising too rigid of a definition. In the 19th century, juries were often given the authority to determine fraud without the assistance of defining fraud during jury instruction. The court was determining fraud on an ad hoc basis, making decisions based upon the standard of the community (or the particular jury). Now fraud has come to be defined by the courts to generally require the plaintiff to show that an intentional misrepresentation was relied upon and caused the plaintiff damages.

According to the FBI, mortgage fraud is a material misstatement, misrepresentation, or omission relating to the property or potential mortgage relied on by an underwriter or lender to fund, purchase, or insure a loan. In other words, it is the intentional enticement of a financial entity to make, buy, or insure a mortgage loan when it would not otherwise have done so, had it possessed correct information. If the misrepresentation alters a decision, then misrepresentation becomes fraud, which is a state or federal crime punishable by up to 30 years in prison and a $1,000,000.00 fine.

FRAUD IN REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS:

- The only currency is paper and documents.
- Most people involved don't experience a great amount of guilt.
- No one seems to get hurt.
- There are no deadly weapons.
- The victim is not even bleeding.

TYPES OF MORTGAGE FRAUD:

(1) Fraud for Property:

- (a) Fraud for property/housing entails minor misrepresentations by the applicant solely for the purpose of purchasing a property for a primary residence. This scheme usually involves a single loan. Although applicants may embellish income and conceal debt, their intent is to repay the loan.
- (b) Fraud for housing represents illegal actions perpetrated solely by the borrower. The simple motive behind this fraud is to acquire and maintain ownership of a house under false pretenses. This type of fraud is typified by a borrower who makes misrepresentations regarding his income or employment history to qualify for a loan.

(2) Fraud for profit:

- (a) Fraud for profit involves multiple loans and elaborate schemes perpetrated to gain illicit proceeds from property sales. It is this second category that is of most concern to law enforcement and the mortgage industry. Gross misrepresentations concerning appraisals and loan documents are common in fraud for profit schemes and participants are frequently paid for their participation.
- (b) Fraud for profit is sometimes referred to as "Industry Insider Fraud" and the motive is to revolve equity, falsely inflate the value of the property, or issue loans based on fictitious properties. Based on existing investigations and mortgage fraud reporting, 80 percent of all reported fraud losses involve collaboration or collusion by industry insiders.

BEWARE OF THESE 7 REAL ESTATE SCAMS:

One of the reasons many home buyers fall victim to scam artists is that there are so many different types of real estate scams. It's impossible to be aware of every possible scam, but here are seven common ones you should familiarize yourself with.

WIRE FRAUD SCAM

There are many different types of wire fraud that can occur in real estate scams, from escrow wire fraud to mortgage wire fraud. This typically happens when a scammer poses as your real estate agent and tricks you into wiring the funds for your closing costs to a fraudulent account. Real estate agent scams can be hard to spot because scammers often use special software that mimics your agent's email address or phone number. Once you wire money to someone, it's nearly impossible to ever get those funds back. As a home buyer, you can protect yourself by understanding what your closing process will look like from the start. And always call to confirm wire transfer requests before sending money.

FORECLOSURE RELIEF SCAM

In a foreclosure relief scam, scammers will target individuals on the brink of having their homes foreclosed on. A company may reach out and promise to either stop the foreclosure or modify the loan in exchange for an upfront payment. This type of scam is especially devastating because not only will the victim be unable to get their money back, but they're still at risk of losing their home. To protect yourself from this type of scam, never agree to pay a company upfront for a service that hasn't been completed. And make sure you do your due diligence about the individual or company promising to help you. For instance, if you're contacted by someone claiming to be an attorney, check your state's bar website to determine whether that person is legitimate.

LOAN-FLIPPING SCAM

In a loan-flipping scam, scammers will convince victims to refinance their homes repeatedly, charging high fees and points on every transaction. As a result, the borrower will end up with high loan payments that they can't afford and limited equity in their home. Seniors often fall victims to these types of scams because they often have significant equity built up in their homes. Not realizing they are being taken advantage of, they can easily fall victim to scam artists. To protect themselves, senior homeowners should only work with lenders they know and trust. And if possible, they should have a friend or family member that they consult with before making these types of financial decisions.

COMMERCIAL REAL ESTATE SCAM

Commercial real estate fraud is often complex and can take various forms, from forged documents to misrepresentations. One of the most common types of commercial real estate fraud is the misappropriation of funds. This happens when a borrower diverts the funds they received from a loan or payment to an expense it wasn't approved for. For instance, if a property management company collects rent payments and uses those funds to pay for another property, this would be a misappropriation of funds. Commercial real estate fraud also involves misrepresentation; for instance, submitting falsified documents or providing false financial statements.

HOME INSPECTION SCAM

Home inspections are vital to the home buying and selling process because this is how the lender ensures you're paying the fair market value for the home. In a home inspection scam, an unqualified provider performs the inspection and hides potential problems with the home. To prevent this type of fraud, make sure to ask lots of questions and look for signs of irregularities. Make sure the inspector can access all areas of the property and ask him to look at the report yourself.

RENTAL SCAM

Most renters will look online to find a new apartment or rental home. Scammers often take advantage of this by listing properties that don't exist to trick borrowers into sending them money. Other times, scammers will pull a bait-and-switch by posting low-quality rentals as a high price point. To prevent rental scams, it's a good idea to check listing photos for the MLS watermark. It's also a good idea to visit the property in person before agreeing to rent it. And you should never sign anything or wire money until you've seen the property.

TITLE OR DEED SCAM

Title or deed fraud involves the involuntary transfer of ownership without the owner's knowledge. Another individual may try to transfer property ownership to another person or borrow money using that property as collateral. This type of fraud is serious because the victim could lose their home as a result. Even if the homeowner doesn't lose their home, a title scam can be an expensive problem to fix. Anyone who owns rental properties or vacation properties they don't personally oversee is a risk. To protect yourself, make sure to watch out for signs that anything is amiss at your property. If you notice that bills are missing or your credit score has taken a hit, you may have been a victim of title fraud.

HOW DO I AVOID REAL ESTATE SCAMS?

Because scammers often use advanced technology and interact digitally with their victims, it can be challenging to avoid real estate scams. However, it's important to stay vigilant about protecting your personal information and bank accounts. Here are some tactics you can take to avoid real estate scams.

- Consult a licensed professional: Only work with licensed real estate agents and lenders that you trust. If someone contacts you out of the blue, verify that they are who they say they are.
- Keep your personal information secure: Never give your personal or financial information to someone you don't trust. Don't provide financial information through emails or website links.
- Avoid upfront fees: Never pay money upfront for a service to your home, especially if that person seems to be pressuring you.
- Be wary of last-minute changes: If you're in the process of buying a home and you receive news of a last-minute change, take the time to verify that it's real. Don't act hastily or out of emotion.
- Avoid off-market transactions: And finally, it's never a good idea to engage in off-market transactions, no matter how good the deal is.

HOW DO I REPORT A SUSPECTED REAL ESTATE SCAM

If you suspect you've been a victim of a real estate scam, you should report it to the proper authorities. Here are some steps you can take:

- Contact your mortgage service provider.
- Report the real estate scam to your local law enforcement agency.
- File a complaint with the Federal Trade Commission.

THE BOTTOM LINE: STAY VIGILANT AGAINST REAL ESTATE SCAMS

Real estate scams are an unfortunate reality, but you don't have to fall victim to one. Only work with qualified professionals you trust and familiarize yourself with some of the common warning signs of mortgage fraud. And if you believe you've been involved in a real estate scam, make sure to contact the authorities immediately.

A VISUAL GUIDE TO FRAUD – LOOK FOR SIGNS THAT YOU ARE BEING STALKED BY CROOKS

- 1. Texts from stranger: When you get a phone text from someone you don't know, a natural, polite instinct is to respond with a "sorry, you have the wrong person". But that can open the door to fraud. Delete the text and mark it as junk to block further contact. Even if it was an honest mistake, it's safe for you not to answer.
- 2. A text about your Netflix account being suspended: Did you get an email or text about your Netflix or other streaming service being suspended? As freaked out as you might be about not being able to catch up on your latest drama, take a breath and go into your Netflix account via the legitimate website. Do not call the number or click on any links in the email or text. This is a way for criminals to steal from you. If you provide any personal information through this link, they will try to commit identity theft in your name.
- 3. Car warranty offers: Criminals prey on our anxiety about facing large vehicle repair bills by pitching worthless car warranties. Often these scams come via a phone call, but they also come in the mail. Federal regulators have recently shut down groups that have stolen hundreds of millions of dollars through deceptive auto warranties.
- 4. Fake business emails: If you receive an email from Amazon, Netflix, Walmart or another retailer or service provider claiming there was a suspicious purchase on your account, do not respond or call the number listed. Go directly to the company's website and log into your account. Crooks replicate big-brand emails in links that take you to a fraudulent site where they seek personal information or some kind of payment.
- 5. Gift cards: Consumers lost $228 million in gift card scams in 2022 says the Federal Trade Commission. Scammers prefer them because they have fewer protections for buyers compared with payment options such as credit cards. And the transaction is largely irreversible. If you are asked to pay for something by sending the codes off a gift card, it is very likely a scam.
- 6. Social media friend requests: Anytime you get a new friend request on social media, especially on Facebook, ask yourself: "Do I really know this person?" or "What does this person want from me?" Generally, it's best to turn down requests from strangers; they might be seeking personal information or intending a fraud attempt.

WHITE COLLAR CRIME DEFINED:

“A crime committed by a person of respectability and high social status in the course of his occupation”.

The term white-collar crime was coined in 1939 and is synonymous with fraud in all its iterations. Today’s scams often use the Internet and other technology to put a new face on old tricks to separate people from their money. Let’s take a look at what types of dirty deeds are considered white-collar crimes and the penalties they can incur.

White collar crime can describe a wide variety of crimes:

- Securities fraud also known as stock fraud and investment fraud is a deceptive practice in the stock or commodities markets that induces investors to make purchase or sale decisions on the basis of false information, frequently resulting in losses, in violation of securities laws. Offers of risky investment opportunities to unsophisticated investors who are unable to evaluate risk adequately and cannot afford loss of capital is a central problem.
- Mortgage fraud is a crime in which the intent is to materially misrepresent or omit information on a mortgage loan application to obtain a loan or to obtain a larger loan than would have not been obtained had the lender or borrower known the truth. Mortgage fraud is not to be confused with predatory mortgage lending, which occurs when a consumer is misled or deceived by agents of the lender. Predatory lending practices often co-exist with mortgage fraud.
- Insurance fraud is an illegal act on the part of either the buyer or seller of an insurance contract. Insurance fraud from the issuer (seller) includes selling policies from non-existent companies, failing to submit premiums and churning policies to create more commissions. Buyer fraud includes exaggerated claims, falsified medical history, post-dated policies, faked death or kidnapping, murder, and much more.
- Embezzlement occurs when someone fraudulently coverts another’s property or money that has been entrusted to him or her. If an employee takes property or funds for personal use that belongs to his or her employer, he or she has embezzled those items. An agent, like a property manager, embezzles when he or she keeps payments from third parties that were intended for the principle.

- Tax evasion is an illegal practice where a person, organization, or corporation intentionally avoids paying his/her/its true tax liability. Those caught evading taxes are generally subject to criminal charges and substantial penalties.
- Money laundering occurs when parties knowingly participate in a financial transaction which is designed to hide the origins of those funds. This often occurs with drug money and other profits made from crimes. The Money Laundering and Control Act also covers a broader range of accounts. Those include securities and money market accounts. Banks have additional reporting requirements and must assign one person to follow up on law enforcement information regarding suspicious activity and individuals.
- Extortion is the illegal demand by a public officer acting with apparent authority. The person demanding money demands it in exchange to either buy his action or prevent him from acting.
- Blackmail is a similar demand to extortion, made by a private official. Blackmail is usually a threat to make something public if not paid.
- Counterfeiting occurs when a person knowingly makes a document or coin that looks genuine but is not. Traditionally, this crime applies to the creation of what looks like U.S. money, but has expanded to include foreign securities and foreign bank notes.
- Forgery is the crime of fraudulently making or altering an instrument that in turn creates or alters the legal liability of another. The easiest way to think of this is forging a check. By forging a check, the forger acts without authority to create a legal obligation on the part of the account holder and bank to pay money to a third party.
- Perjury is the crime of knowingly giving false testimony in judicial proceedings after swearing to tell the truth. This crime occurs if a witness lies on the stand. But to be prosecuted the person must first swear to tell the truth.
- Bribery occurs when an individual or business gives money, property, or any other benefit to a particular person for the purpose of influencing that person's actions and judgment in their favor. Giving a bribe is one crime. Receiving a bribe is also a crime. And if a person tries to coerce a person or entity into giving him or her a bribe, that is also a crime.
- Occupancy Fraud This occurs where the borrower wishes to obtain a mortgage to acquire an investment property, but states on the loan application that the borrower will occupy the property as the primary residence or as a second home. If undetected, the borrower typically obtains lower interest rate that was warranted. Because lenders typically charge a higher interest rate for non-owner-occupied properties, which historically have higher delinquency rates, the lender receives insufficient return on capital and is over exposed to lose relative to what was expected in the transaction. In addition, lenders allow larger loans on owner-occupied homes compared to loans for investment properties. When occupancy fraud occurs, it is likely that taxes on gains are not paid, resulting in additional fraud. It is considered fraud because the borrower has materially misrepresented the risk to the lender to obtain more favorable loan terms.

- Income fraud: This occurs when a borrower overstates his/her income to qualify for a mortgage or for a larger loan amount. This was most often seen with so-called “stated income” mortgage loans (popularly referred to as “liar loans”), where the borrower, or a loan officer acting for a borrower with or without the borrower’ knowledge, stated without verification the income needed to qualify for the loan. Because mortgage lenders today do not have “stated income” loans, income fraud is seen in traditional full documentation loans where the borrower forges or alters an employer-issued W-2, tax returns and/or bank account records to provide support for the inflated income. All lenders obtain an official IRS transcript that must match the borrower provided tax returns. It is considered fraud because in most cases the borrower would not have qualified for the loan had the true income been disclosed. The “mortgage meltdown” was caused, in part, when large numbers of borrowers in areas of rapidly increasing home prices lied about their income, acquired homes they could not afford, and then defaulted. Many of the past problems no longer exist.
- Employment fraud: this occurs when a borrower claims self-employment in a non-existent company or claims a higher position (e.g. manager) in a real company, to provide justification for a fraudulent representation of the borrower’s income.
- Appraisal fraud: Occurs when a home’s appraised value is deliberately overstated or understated. When overstated, more money can be obtained by the borrower in the form of cash-out refinance, by the seller in a purchase transaction, or by the organizers of a for-profit mortgage fraud scheme. Appraisal fraud also includes cases where the home’s value is deliberately understated to get a lower price on a foreclosed home, or in a fraudulent attempt to induce a lender to decrease the amount owed on the mortgage in a loan modification. A dishonest appraiser may be involved in the preparation of the fraudulent appraisal, or an existing and accurate appraisal may be altered by someone with knowledge of graphic editing tools such as Adobe Photoshop. Appraisal Independence is current law.

- Cash-back schemes: Occur where the trust price of a property is illegally inflated to provide cash-back to transaction participants, most often the borrowers, who receive a “rebate” which is not disclosed to the lender. As a result, the lender lends too much, and the buyer pockets the overage or splits it with other participants, including the seller or the real estate agent. This scheme requires appraisal fraud to deceive the lender. “Get Rich Quick” real-escrow gurus’ courses frequently rely heavily on this mechanism for profitability.
- Shotgunning: Occurs when multiple loans for the same home are obtained simultaneously for a total amount greatly in excess of the actual value of the property. These schemes leave lenders exposed to large losses because the subsequent mortgages are junior to the first mortgage to be recorded and the property value is insufficient for the subsequent lenders to collect against the property in foreclosure. The result of this fraud is that lenders often litigate which has first priority to the property.
- Working the gap: A technique which entails the excessive lien stacking knowingly executed on a specific property within an inordinately narrow timeframe, via the serial recording of multiple Deeds of Trust or Assignments of Note. When recording a legal document in the United States, a time gap exists between when the Deed of Trust is submitted to the Recorders Office and when it actually shows up in the data. The precision timing technique of “working the gap” between the recording of a deed and its appearance in the database is essential for this kind of deception. The goal of the perpetrator is the theft of the funds from each lender by deceit, with all lenders simultaneously and erroneously believing their respective Deeds of Trust to be senior in position, when in actuality there can only be one.
- Identity theft: Occurs when a person assumes the identity of another and uses that identity to obtain a mortgage without the knowledge or consent of the victim. In these schemes, the thieves disappear without making payments on the mortgage. The schemes are usually not discovered until the lender tries to collect from the victim, who may incur substantial costs trying to prove the theft of his/her identity.
- Corporate fraud: Fraud by high level corporate officials became a subject of wide national attention during the early 2000s, as exemplified by corporate officer misconduct at Enron. It became a problem of such scope that the Bush Administration announced what it described as “aggressive agenda” against corporate fraud.

- Dummy Corporations: Dummy corporations may be created by fraudsters to create the illusion of being an existing corporation with a similar name. Fraudsters then sell securities in the dummy corporation by misleading the investor into thinking that they are buying shares in the real corporation.
- Internet fraud: According to enforcement officials of the Securities and Exchange Commission, criminals engage in pump-and-dump schemes, in which false and/or fraudulent information is disseminated in chat rooms, forums, internet boards and via email (spamming), with the purpose of causing a dramatic price increase in thinly traded stocks or stocks of shell companies (the “pump”). When the price reaches a certain level, criminals immediately sell off their holdings of those stocks (the “dump”), realizing substantial profits before the stock price falls back to its unusual low level. Any buyers of the stock who are unaware of the fraud become victims once the price falls.
- Ponzi schemes: A Ponzi scheme is an investment fund where withdrawals are financed by subsequent investors, rather than profit obtained through investment activities. The largest instance of securities fraud committed by an individual ever is a Ponzi scheme operated by former NASDAQ chairman Bernard Madoff, which caused up to an estimated $64.8 billion in losses depending on which method is used to calculate the losses is used prior to its collapse.
- Mechanics Lien Fraud: Senior citizen was selling her home. When title was ordered there was a mechanics lien filed against the home for $6,000.00 by a contractor for work performed on the home recently. The seller said they did not have any work done. A search was done on the contractor who filed the lien. Turns out his business practice is to file many liens against many properties (mostly senior citizens) for amounts ranging between $5,000 to $10,000 and his rate of return was pretty high. Many paid him only because they couldn't remember if they had the work done and just wanted to get this cleared off their property. And, many were sales that were done after “mom or dad” died and the personal representative of the estate just paid the lien not knowing. In a further search, some of the properties he filed a lien against were vacant land properties and the lien was for a roof!
- Cashier check fraud: This was a case in Georgia. It was a for sale by owner transaction. The PSA was emailed by the purchaser with instructions that a cashier's check in the amount of $45,000.00 was being sent in the mail. PSA says that the EM is to be paid directly to sellers upon acceptance of the PSA. Sellers accepted PSA and sent in a demand for the $45,000.00 to be paid to a third party. Closer had deposited the cashier's check on day one and wired out the $45,000.00 on day three. One day five the cashier's check was returned for NSF. Closer calls bank in Georgia where the cashier's check was from. Turns out it was a fraudulent check. Closer attempted to call the phone number on the PSA and it was a wrong number. Closer tried to email the purchaser and got no reply. Closer sent certified letter to address of the purchaser and found out it was a vacant lot. Closer, who is an independent closing company, filed a claim with her E&O insurance carried. Claim was denied because closer did not follow protocol in her E&O coverage on deposits and clearing times.

PENALTIES:

There are several different types of penalties that can be enforced against the defendant. First, the defendant can forfeit any property that was used to commit the crime. Forfeiture is rare in white-collar crimes, but is an option for the court. The more common punishments are fines and jail time. Recently, fines have been adjusted to recognize that what is a significant penalty to an individual may not affect a business. The fines are designed to deter criminal behavior so this had to be adjusted.

There are also mandatory sentences now for the officers and directors who were in positions of authority at the time of the crime. The U.S. Sentencing Guidelines allow reductions in sentences if the managers were actively engaged in trying to prohibit the crime. Under the November 2003 amendments, the court can take the following factors into consideration when determining sentences:

- The seriousness of the offense
- The company's history of violations
- Its cooperation in the investigation
- The effectiveness of its compliance program
- The role of its senior management in the wrongdoing

With the advent of the internet, white-collar crimes are not just for businessmen anymore!

REAL ESTATE FRAUD.....WOULD YOU KNOW IT IF YOU SAW IT?

Real estate practitioners must be vigilant of red flags that may signal that they are in the midst of a legal matter than involves real estate fraud. In most cases, potential clients that provide information that just does not add up or is unsupported by the documentation presented can tip you off. In some cases, those clients themselves may be the victims of the scam, and many times they may be participating in a fraud that they themselves initiated.

Individuals can do inconceivable things with personal and public information ranging from very minor to mind blowing scams.

What should an individual do when he or she believes that his or her client is involved in a real estate scam? The first step is understanding the types of real estate fraud that are popular with these scammers. The second step is following the paper trail to get to the bottom of the situation. You may find that there are many active and unwitting participants – a list of players that may include mortgage brokers, loan officers, appraisers, real estate brokers, closing attorneys, escrow officers, buyers, sellers, straw men, investors, bankers, and title companies.

Real estate scams can lead to individuals having their houses stolen from underneath their feet, bankruptcy, damaged credit reports and credit ratings – not to mention the attorney fees that will be owed as they try to escape from the real estate scam. Worse yet, your clients may find themselves stuck between a rock and a hard place since the scam may cloud their title. This could prevent them from being able to sell their house or take out another mortgage or equity in the current house to use as collateral for a new home.

While anyone may fall prey to one of these scams, the groups most targeted by real estate scammers are usually the elderly, homeowners already in foreclosure, and individuals with low income.

The following is the most recent frauds we are hearing about, everywhere.....

IS THE SELLER REALLY THE OWNER OF THE PROPERTY?

An agent got a phone call from a person who lives in Florida and he said he has a 5-acre parcel in Deer Park he owns and would like to sell it. He heard from a friend that lives her that she is a great agent and he would love working with her.

She got all the information and did a market analysis and decided the property was worth about $240,000 and he agreed. She mentioned to him that when she went to the property, she noticed the entire 5 acres had wheat growing on it. He said he really didn't care about that, just wanted to sell the property and the new purchaser could harvest it.

She sent him the listing agreement to review and sign and get back to her.

The property was listed and an offer came in the next day from another agent – full price offer.

Seller accepted the offer and the closing date was scheduled. They arranged to have the documents overnighted to him and he would arrange for a notary to be there for the signing.

The day before closing the purchaser decided he wanted to walk the property. While he was there a man came up to him and said what are you doing here. Purchaser said I am buying this property and it closes tomorrow. The man said I am a farmer and this is my wheat growing here and I have a 5-year lease with the seller who just lives down the road. The purchaser said you must be mistaken s the seller lives in Florida.

Purchaser calls his agent and tells him about what he just learned.

Buyer broker calls listing agent and tells him about all this.

Listing agent calls seller in Florida and the seller says I am selling this property and it is scheduled to close tomorrow and I have a notary lined up. He was quite upset that the listing agent was questioning him.

Listing agent called her broker and they decided to do some more checking. They checked with Scout and found out a seller with the same name does live down the street from the property that is being sold and decided to stop in to talk to this person.

They head to the property this “seller” lives in and find out the guy really is her seller. He has ID that supports this and other documentation including the papers of when he purchased this land over 20 years ago and the leases he has with the farmer.

Together they call this “fake” seller in Florida and ask him if he could send his ID to them. He said he didn’t have any way to do that. They told him to just take a picture of it with his phone and send it to them. He hung up on them!

What could the agent have done differently?

Would you get the police involved?

Would you let others know about this crime in the real estate industry so it doesn’t happen to them?

AND HOW ABOUT THIS:

40-year listing agreement

By Jessie Jones KIRO 7 News 2/14/22

MV Realty's business practice is simple: they give you cash. If you don't sell your home, you can keep it. But if you do sell, you must use their agent to sell your home. These are 40-year deals that can follow you to your grave, and now there are lawsuits and other legal action regarding this company, in Washington state and all over the county.

Florida-based MV Realty operates in 33 states and has more than 250 transactions just in the Puget South region.

Now, the company finds itself fighting two more lawsuits from state Attorneys General.

Florida, Pennsylvania, and Massachusetts have filed lawsuits against the company; North Carolina and Georgia are investigating this company.

State Senator Mark Mullet from Issaquah held a hearing on this. He is concerned about the marketing of these products to the elderly. Elderly residents of Washington should feel like people to call them up and put them in deals that are financially good for them.

WASHINGTON STATE HOUSE PASSES BILL TO END 40-YEAR EXCLUSIVE REAL ESTATE LISTING CONTRACTS.

By: Jessie Jones KIRO 7 news 4/7/23

Senate Bill 5399- legislation that would curb those contracts to five years made it through the House with a unanimous 98-0 vote.

Here is an example that happened in Puget South

Betty Wiedenhof said her 66-year-old son, Ron Glen, he signed with MV Realty for $2,300. When he died four months later, his mother said she had no idea he had signed with the company. Since she was unaware of the contract, she used another real estate agent and was forced to pay MV Realty 3% of the contract value of the home, some $23,000, or faced getting a potential lawsuit.

BAIT AND SWITCH MOVERS:

Once you find a new place to call home, you must get all your stuff there. That's where moving scams come into play.

Say you fill out a form for a moving company estimate, outlining all your belongings, and you receive an estimate for $4,000. But when the company shows up, they tell you it is going to be $10,000. Or maybe the company showed up and packed up your stuff, then informed you the total would be much more than they quoted initially, essentially holding your belongings for ransom. Or maybe they just took your deposit and didn't even bother to show up at all.

Unfortunately, this kind of thing is happening all the time. More than 15,000 complaints about moving companies were filed with the Better Business Bureau in 2022.

Moving is expensive and it can be tempting to simply go with the most affordable estimate. This is not something to shop for solely based on price. Ask the moving company for their license number and see if any complaints have been lodged with the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration (a division of the U.S. Department of Transportation.)

Check them out with the BBB too. The BBB also recommends getting three in-person or virtual quotes from different companies; If a company gives you a large quote over the phone, it says, that's a red flag. Avoid giving any large chunk of money in advance. A small deposit is normal to reserve the movers, but reputable companies will not require full payment until the job is completed.

WIRE FRAUD

Definition of Wire Fraud:

Per 18 U.S.C. 1343, it is illegal to devise or scheme to defraud or to obtain money or property through false means by using wire, radio or television to execute the scheme. A person that knowingly and willfully engages in wire fraud may be subject to criminal prosecution. A person found guilty of wire fraud is subject to a fine and/or prison of no more than 20 years.

Wire Transfer Process:

A Transaction that moves funds from one bank to another bank

- Domestic or international wires
- Outgoing domestic – sender provides personal identification information
- Incoming domestic – receiver (beneficiary) provides specific information to sender
- International transfers – currency of sender typically converted to currency of receiver
- Transfers are not instantaneous – domestic wires typically take a few minutes to several hours, international wires typically take 1-2 days up to 10 days

Example of Money Wiring Scams:

- Sweepstakes/lottery scams
- Overpayment scams
- Relationship scams
- Mystery shopper scams
- Online purchase scams
- Advance fee loans scams
- Family emergency or friend-in-need scams

Preventative Measures Closers Can Take:

- Use dual control with fellow employees when executing wire transfers
- Keep customer information under lock and key at all times
- Keep track of passwords, tokens, etc.
- Minimize internet use with business computers used for online banking

WIRE FRAUD AND HOW IT CAN HAPPEN:

When a purchase and sale agreement is received by an escrow office, it is customary for the closer or his/her assistant, when setting up the file, to send out an opening package to both the purchaser and seller. This opening package will be made up of the following:

Purchasers:

1. Opening welcome letter
2. Escrow closing instructions that usually contain the escrow company's boiler plate language of the closing process and what certain terms mean
3. Driving instructions to the office
4. Insurance request information
5. Wiring instructions should the purchaser want to have their balance to close funds wired into the escrow account rather than a cashier's check brought to the signing appointment
6. If the closer is a Limited Practice Officer, then a document called APR 12 which notifies the client of the closers name and the number assigned to them by the Washington State Bar Association of what their limits of practice are

Sellers:

1. Opening welcome letter
2. Escrow closing instructions that usually contain the escrow company's boiler plate language of the closing process and what certain terms mean
3. Driving instructions to the office
4. Borrower authorization so the closer can order a payoff, if any
5. Utility request information
6. If the closer is a Limited Practice Officer, then the document called APR12 which notifies the client of the closers name and the number assigned to them by the Washington State Bar and what their limits of practice are

So, now we know that the purchaser has received in this opening letter the trust account's wiring instructions of the escrow company to be used when it is time to complete the transaction, normally 30-45 days later.

A hacker will break into an escrow company's e-mail account to obtain information about upcoming real estate transactions. After monitoring the account to determine the likely timing of a close, the hacker will send an e-mail to the buyer, posing as the escrow company.

The fraudulent e-mail will contain new wiring instructions or routing information, and will request that the purchaser send transaction-related funds accordingly. Unfortunately, some purchasers have fallen for this scheme and have lost money.

Because the perpetrator has been monitoring the escrow e-mail account, the fraudulent communication may include detailed and accurate information pertaining to the real estate transaction, including previously given banking information, escrow information, and significant dates.

Escrow companies have many different practices in place to help prevent this from occurring. The following are a couple of different practices I know of:

- Inform clients at the beginning about your communication practices and the possibility of fraudulent activity in the industry. Explain that you will never send or request that they send sensitive information via e-mail.
- Prior to wiring any funds, the wiper should contact the escrow company via a verified phone number and confirm that the wiring information is accurate.

HERE IS AN EXAMPLE OF HOW WIRE FRAUD ALMOST HAPPENED AT AN ESCROW OFFICE

It was a normal day at the closing office and Mary decided that during her lunch hour she would do some personal banking and pay some bills. She logged onto her bank and sent a few of her creditors payments and then logged out, totally normal things happening.

When lunch was over, Mary had to check on a couple of wires for the trust account to see if they were there as she had two funding's she had to complete that afternoon. Both her wires were in so she proceeded to cut checks on each of those closings. Both had payoffs to underlying lien holders that had to be wired out.

Mary sent out the two wires. When a closer sends out a wire they set it up in our system so that another "set of eyes" can review during the day what is going on.

Our office manager at another location noticed the wires out, but saw there was another wire there that went out for $99,201.22 that was on set up by a closer, just came out of our trust account.

She immediately contacted the closer and found out that there was no such wire associated with any account.

The bank was contacted and told to reverse the wire out. They caught it in the nick of time, 10 minutes later and it would not have been possible to reverse.

Mary's computer was shut down to be analyzed what was happening, and here is what was discovered:

When Mary was working on her "personal" accounts, a hacker got into her system. This hacker then followed all her key strokes and eventually saw her access the trust account and wire funds out and then put in this "false" wire, and almost got away with it!

The bank set up a new system with the escrow company using another type of key fob system and then adding a third person on a check list. And, the company placed a restriction on anyone using the work computer for personal business.

NOTE TO EMPLOYEES: DO NOT ACCESS YOUR PERSONAL ACCOUNTS ON YOUR BUSINESS COMPUTERS!

AND, here is an actual wire fraud closing that occurred in Spokane:

Purchaser lives in Seattle area and is buying a home in Spokane – (first time homebuyer)

Closing date is Thursday October 19th

Monday, October 16th – closer calls purchaser and finds out where they will be tomorrow so they can arrange a courtesy signing in that area. Closer gives purchaser amount to close and offers option of cashier's check or wired funds. Purchaser would like to go to their bank and get a cashier's check prior to the signing appointment and will give the funds to the mobile notary to send back overnight express with the loan documents.

Tuesday October 17th at 9:06 a.m. Purchaser and agent (copied) receives an email from Closer:

"As we approaching closing, we would be needing the down payment of the purchase price to be made available to our escrow account hopefully today or the latest tomorrow morning to avoid lateness of closing funds. Kindly let me know if you can achieve this today so I can forward you our wiring instructions."

If you have any questions, please do not hesitate to send me an email or call."

NOTE: THE EMAIL CONTAINED AND EXTRA "I" IN THE CLOSERS EMAIL ADDRESS (tiitle) and the phone number listed was the wrong name. And the selling agents email spelled out her whole name rather than how she normally does it with her first initial and last name at gmail.com

9:09 am agent writes to purchaser: from same wrong email address

Please see below from closer. They are requesting for the cash balance of the purchase price, let me know if this can be possible today. I am in a workshop most of today, but I do have access to my email. Please drop me an email to let me know what you wish to do or call closer from the title company at.....

9:30 purchaser sends email to his agent: (to that same wrong email address)

"I thought I was supposed to give the signing lady a cashier's check for $44,496.19? Isn't that included in the cashier's check?"

I am on calls until noon. I was going to go get the cashier's check at noon. Should I be wiring the money? Transfers go out from my credit union at 1pm"

10:00 am from selling agent to purchaser: (of course from that same wrong email address)

“The title company has requested you wire the funds. I will request for their wiring instructions shortly and send to you so you can send the wire.

12:00 Purchaser meets with mobile notary to sign documents. Nothing is addressed about the money. Mobile notary returns document to closer so they can receive at 10:30 the next day

Wed, October 18th overnight express documents arrive at closing office around 10:30. Closer has appointment with the seller to sign first thing in the am (Thursday for a funding that day) Closer puts packet together for the lender and title company and discovers the cashier’s check is not there. Contacts the mobile notary who calls back and said the purchaser did not give her a check.

Closer calls purchaser and asks about the cashier’s check. Purchaser says I wired the funds per your instruction. Closer says, I did not send you new wiring instructions, please send me the email you think I sent to you and please call your bank right away to see if they can stop that wire!

- They were not able to stop the wire, it was gone, out of the country!
- Listing agent called me the next day to tell me what happened....to make matters worse, his seller was in their new home on early possession.

OUTGOING MAIL FRAUD....

An escrow settlement company issued checks at closing for a home warranty policy in the amount of $375.00 and $2,500.00 to a contractor for work done, both from separate closings.

Weeks later the office received calls looking for the payments. The checks were sent by regular mail. Neither of the checks arrived at their intended destinations.

The escrow office contacted their accounting department to void the lost checks so they could be reissued. They were shocked to discover both checks had actually cleared the bank. The manager requested copies of the cashed checks to prove to both the home warranty company and the contractor that they had received their payments in full.

The manager received copies of the checks and found the payee name on both checks had been changed to an individual's name. The checks had been endorsed and cashed!

The account manager then contacted the escrow officer and informed her that the checks could not be voided and reissued since they were not lost – they were stolen. The manager then opened fraud claims and began the investigation.

In the course of ordinary business practices, the office delivers an electronic file containing the check numbers and amounts of each check disbursement created in their system every business banking day. Any check presented to the bank for payment must match by check number and amount in order for the check to pay at the bank.

The accounting manager quickly added Payee Positive Pay to the attributes checked by the banking system, before a check can be paid to prohibit any further incidents like the two they just experienced. Now the electronic file contains the check number, check amount and the payee name. Then the manager filed losses for the $375.00 and $2,500.00 to replace the funds in the trust account, so the checks could be reissued.

After reissuing the checks, the office started their own investigation to see how the checks could have ended up in the hands of fraudsters. The office takes measures to ensure their mail is mailed by a staff member each and every day. They have not yet discovered how the checks were stolen during the delivery to their intended destination, but for now they know if they are stolen again and altered, they cannot be cashed at the bank.

Moral of the story:

Since we know that outgoing mail is a target of theft, make sure your office is doing all it can to secure the mail that leaves the office:

- Make sure an employee or special courier is delivering the mail to a locked box
- The mail should never be overflowing out of the locked mail box where it could be taken from the box by anyone other than a postal worker
- Ensure your trust accounts have Positive Pay to ensure stolen, altered checks cannot be cashed
- If a check is stolen and cannot be cashed it will likely be thrown in the trash. Follow up on all outstanding checks from the outstanding checks report generated by the bank. Certain checks with a payee name of an insurance company, taxing authority, or a payoff lender deserve immediate attention. All other outstanding checks should be reviewed and investigated and reissued if they are older than 90 days

OVERVIEW OF POSITIVE PAY

What is Positive Pay?

Positive Pay is an automated fraud detection tool offered by the Cash Management Department of most banks. In its simplest form, it is a service that matches the account number, check number, and dollar amount of each check presented for payment against a list of checks previously authorized and issued by the company. All three components of the check must match exactly or it will not pay.

How does Positive Pay work?

Positive Pay requires the company to send (transmit) a file of issued checks to the bank each day checks are written. When those checks are presented for payment at the bank, they are compared electronically against the list of transmitted checks. The check-issue file sent to the bank contains the check number, account number, issue date, and dollar amount. Sometimes the payee name is included, but is not part of the matching service.

When a check is presented that does not have a “match” in the file, it becomes an “exception Item”. The bank sends a fax or an image of the exception item to the client. The client reviews the image and instructs the bank to pay or return the check.

There is generally a fee charged by the bank for Positive Pay, although some banks now offer the service for free. The fee might well be considered an “insurance premium” to help avoid check fraud losses and liability.

THE SELLER DID WHAT!

It was a “normal” signing appointment. One of the documents the seller had to sign was the Amendment to the Closing Instructions, where the seller will check a box on the form of how he/she will obtain their loan proceeds. They have many choices:

- Pick up the check
- Have the funds wired to the sellers account in which they would then give us the necessary information so we can wire it to their bank
- Mail the check
- Have the funds go to another closing company for their purchase of a new property
- Deposit the funds into their bank account in which they would leave the closer a deposit slip of a local bank

In this case the seller said he would pick up his check when it was ready.

The closer called the seller to tell him his check was ready and the seller said he'd be in the office at 1:00 to pick up the check. The seller went to the closing office and got his check and left the office. He left and came back 5 minutes later and said he changed his mind and wanted to have his funds wired and gave the closer his wiring instructions and left.

The closer wrote “VOID” on the check and wired the proceeds to the seller's checking account.

What the closer did not know, is that when the seller went to his car, he took a picture of the check and deposited it in his bank account with his new bank app. After he left the closing office, he went directly to his bank account. Then, once the wire hit his bank, he withdrew the DOUBLED proceeds amount from his bank in cash and left town.

Of course, he eventually got caught, but he caused a lot of problems for the escrow company. Because we are talking about a “trust” account, a claim had to be submitted immediately for the doubled proceeds amount and deposited into the trust account. The escrow company was out this money.

What was that seller thinking!!!!

HERE IS A STORY THAT WAS NOT FRAUD, BUT REALLY AN HONEST MISTAKE

An escrow officer initiated a wire transfer for the proceeds to the seller in the amount of $498,300.00. Her assistant served as the counter-signature on the outgoing wire form. After the form was signed, the escrow officer scanned and emailed the form to the accounting center to initiate the wire using the online banking system.

Later that day, the seller called complaining he had not received his proceeds. The escrow officer looked up the federal reference number and gave it to the seller to provide to his bank to trace the wire transfer. The bank traced the wire but unfortunately the funds were deposited to another account – not the account of the seller!

The seller called back to let the escrow officer know the wire was sent to the wrong account. The escrow officer pulled her file and compared the posted wire information against the wire instructions provided by the seller. Sure enough, the account number posted by the escrow officer on the outgoing wire form had one duplicate digit: “22”!

The escrow officer began working with the accounting center to recall the wire. The accounting representative contacted the sending representative at the Bank who recalled the wire from the receiving Bank. The receiving Bank requested authorization from the account holder to recall the wire. In the meantime, the escrow officer filed a loss for the proceeds so she could pay the seller who was anxiously awaiting the money.

The recall request remained unanswered for more than a week. The escrow officer and her management team assumed the account holder was out of town for spring break, but after a week the accounting center followed up with the Bank regarding their recall request. The sending Bank contacted the receiving bank informed them the account holder had died!

The sending Bank and the escrow company were shocked! How could they obtain account holder authorization when the account holder was deceased? The receiving Bank agreed to attempt to contact the account holder’s wife, since they could not release the account holder’s name or contact information to the escrow holder.

Now, weeks later, the escrow office is still out the $498,300.00 loss and has not received the funds initially wired. Luckily, the account is frozen and the deceased person’s heirs cannot access the money sent to the account in error. The Company has retained outside counsel to petition the bank, as well as the heirs to the deceased person’s estate, to return the funds.

Moral of the story: If you are the “second set of eyes” on a wire out, stop what you are doing and check and re-check all information provided one more time.

NOW, let's see how your knowledge of Fraud is by reviewing the following questions.

(The answers are at the end with full explanations.)

FRAUD AWARENESS QUIZ:

Mortgage fraud is a material misstatement, misrepresentation, or omission relied upon by an underwriter or lender to fund, purchase or insure a loan. It continues to evolve as lenders and fraudsters alike adapt to changing economic conditions and government regulations. How much do you know about it? Take the quiz to find out.

 - c. Civil and criminal charges
 - d. Tax evasion and wire fraud

10. Who are usually the perpetrators in a fraud for housing scheme:
 - a. Cops
 - b. Industry professionals
 - c. Drug dealers
 - d. Ex-cons

QUIZ ANSWERS:

1. The Title Policy insures against:

Answer: Fraud and forgery – The Covered Risks section of both an Owner’s and Lender’s title policy state the insured is covered for, “a defect in the title caused by.... forgery, fraud...” Since this coverage is offered in all of the title policies available, fraud and forgery are of major concern to the title industry.

2. A straw buyer is:

Answer: Someone with good credit who agrees to help someone with bad credit obtain a loan - Generally, a straw buyer is someone recruited by a perpetrator to take out a mortgage and purchase a house in their name. The straw buyer normally does not live in the house or have the intent to reside at the house. They often receive cash in exchange for the use of their credit and name.

3. Which of the following items are commonly fabricated in order to induce a lender to approve a loan?

Answer: All of the above – Mortgage fraud schemes involve falsifying a borrower’s financial status by including material misstatements on documents the lender’s underwriter relies on, when evaluating the eligibility of a borrower. This is done by supplying fictitious employment verifications, mortgage loan applications and bank statements.

4. What document is the most forged document in a real estate transaction?

Answer: Power of Attorney – A Power of Attorney is written authorization to represent or act on another’s behalf in private affairs, business or some other legal matter. As a result, perpetrators sometimes forge the names of property owners in order to sell a property out from under the rightful owner or use the Power of Attorney to get a loan to strip all the equity from a property unbeknownst to the property owner.

5. Flopping occurs in what type of transaction?

Answer: Short Sale – A flopping scheme requires the perpetrator to conceal or provide falsified information to the loan servicer. This is information the servicer needs to make informed short sale decisions. These concealments might include hiding the true parties to the transaction, any contingent transactions or the true value of the property.

6. Which of the following steps can a settlement agent follow to assist in preventing fraud from occurring in one of their transactions?

Answer: All of the above – The settlement agent is often the best defense against mortgage fraud. Without them, the fraud might never be prevented. It is important the settlement agent fully disclose all receipts and disbursements on the Closing Disclosure Statement and material facts to the funding lender.

7. Proper identification should be issued by a government entity and include a physical description and:

Answer: Include the bearer's signature and photograph – Forged documents are often one of the many elements included in a mortgage fraud scheme. It is important to the lender and Title Company the borrower is properly identified. Although the identification requirements for the purpose of notarizing vary from one state to the next, it is often the lender who requires the borrower present identification which contains all of these elements.

8. Which of the following is a red-flag warning of a possible fraudulent transaction?

Answer: A, B, C and D – Although any one of these items alone might not be an indicator – combined they definitely have the makings of a scheme.

9. What are the two classifications mortgage fraud schemes are put into?

Answer: Fraud for profit and fraud for housing – The FBI defines these two classifications. They state fraud for housing entails misrepresentations by the applicant for the purpose of purchasing a property for a primary residence. This scheme usually involves a single loan. Fraud for profit often involves multiple loans and elaborate schemes perpetrated to gain illicit proceeds from property sales.

10. Who are usually the perpetrators in a fraud for housing scheme?

Answer: Industry professionals – Industry professionals are the ones most familiar with the ins and outs of the loan process – and most often the perpetrators involved in a fraud for housing scheme. The scheme could never occur without the cooperation of the real estate agents, loan officers, appraiser and settlement agent assisting in all the material misrepresentations which must be provided.

I NEVER HEARD THE TERM “STRAW BUYER”!

It was February 2002 and business was slow. The spring rush was just around the corner. I received two purchase and sale agreements for over $400,000.00. I was delighted. One was scheduled to close in 30 days and one in 60 days. Both were the same purchasers and the seller was the builder on both.

The mortgage loan broker sent me the customary 1003 on both of them, at different times to set up and the files proceeded as “normal” in every way.

The payoffs were ordered and title was in great shape and I was ready to proceed once the purchasers were approved for their loan. Loan docs were received and both seller and purchaser came into to sign. The purchasers did not have to bring in much money to close, I believe it was under $1,000.00 and the earnest money was a “note” for $1.00 While I was funding this loan I thought to myself, wow, a brand new home and such a small down payment and it wasn't even a VA loan. The loan fees were very high though.

I remember calling the purchasers (there were no real estate agents on these transactions) and telling them the loan was funded and they needed to contact the builder for their keys. They didn't seem too excited, like most purchasers were. (That should have been the first clue!)

Then, about 30 days later, I received loan documents on the other file. Purchaser and seller both came in to sign and it was scheduled to close and fund tomorrow. Once again, I noticed that they didn't have much of a down payment, again, under $1,000.00.

During the closing, the purchasers had no questions whatsoever about the charges, payment terms, anything, which was highly unusual. I wanted to ask them which brand new home were they going to live in, but they didn't appear to want to talk.

And, once again, when the loan was funded, I called the purchasers to tell them it was funded and they could contact their seller for the keys directly since there were no real estate agents again on this transaction, no excitement again!

A few months went by and I had another purchase and sale agreement provided to me by the mortgage loan broker with the same purchasers, but a different seller, with a sales price of $299,000.00. The same mortgage loan broker sent me the 1003 again. I decided to pull the two previous files. In reviewing I noticed the 1003's on the two previous files and the new one I had open all were identical and were all copies, just dated differently.

Now, I woke up! I called my company attorney and told him about the three files, and he said I bet your purchasers are “straw buyers”. I said “WHAT ARE STRAW BUYERS?” He proceeded to educate me on the term and said for me gather up the three files and to meet with him the very next day to review.

During the meeting with my attorney the following day, he made a couple of calls and found out that no one ever moved into either home, utilities were never even changed over. (At closing the purchasers and sellers signed a form instructing me that utilities would be handled outside of escrow.) Matter in fact, the utility bill was 4 months past due and shut off. And, when we called the lender, no payments were ever made.

So, the attorney instructed me to tell the parties that I would not be able to do the new closing and they would have to find another closing company, which I did immediately.

And, that is how I found out about “straw buyers”!

A DIFFERENT KIND OF FRAUD, BUT STILL FRAUDULENT OR AT LEAST DECEPTIVE!

Bob was a very successful real estate agent in our area. I had only done a few transactions for him over the years so when he brought me in 6 purchases, yes, SIX, I was very excited. They were all different sellers but all the same purchaser who was an investor Bob was working with.

They were all seller financing transactions with nothing down. So, I set them all up and proceeded to close the first one. I noticed the on form 34 (that is the form used to create the terms of seller financing prior to the current form now available as 22C) that there were some strange terms.

1. Unsecured Promissory note in the amount of $80,000.00 with interest at the rate of 10%, first payment due 60 days from closing in the amount of $450.00
2. Purchaser will set up reserve account for taxes and insurance
3. Escrow fees to be split 50/50

Unsecured Promissory Note – what was that all about? I called the selling agent and questioned that. He told me I was to do exactly what the agreed upon terms said for me to do.

I proceeded with the closing. I thought it was strange there was not a deed of trust on this transaction for security for the sellers and called the listing agent to confirm that was the intention. The listing agent told me this was his first seller financing transaction and said it was explained to both him and his sellers when the offer was presented as the selling agent went with the agent to present the offer.

Once again, I called my attorney and told him about the terms. He said that he felt I should have a disclaimer as part of the closing and he prepared one for me as part of the closing stating the parties understood that the property would not be the security for this note, that it would be unsecured per the contract instructions, and if they had any questions, they should seek legal advice prior to signing. Of course, the selling agent and the purchaser were not very happy with me but we proceeded. The sellers read the disclosure and signed it. I was shocked that they signed it! No questions asked.

The closing recorded and funded.

I checked on the long-term escrow collection a few months later, just out of curiosity and found the purchaser never made the first payment or the second or third. The sellers decided they would have no choice but to commence with foreclosure proceedings and hired an attorney.

The attorney called our office and asked for copies of the documents in escrow and an accounting of the delinquent payments. A couple of days later the attorney called and asked why the note was not secured by a deed of trust on the property. I explained about the closing and he had the seller give me permission to give him a complete copy of the closing file, which I did. He then called back the next day and said the closing file was in perfect order and it was a good thing I had my attorney complete the disclaimer.

The attorney said all the sellers had was the promissory note. He also mentioned that when the sellers called me to do a foreclosure action, he called the title company and ordered a "litigation guarantee". (A litigation guarantee is a form of a title search that is done so that the attorney doing the foreclosure action knows of all liens on the property so that all can be named on the action.) In this case he should not have ordered it because there was no property that was secured, but he did find out something very interesting. Exactly 3 weeks after the sale of the property to the purchasers, they borrowed money on this property and put a $60,000.00 deed of trust against this property. So, they purchased it with nothing down, never made payments on the note to the seller, AND got cash from a loan for $60,000.00!!!!

Now, does this have FRAUD written all over it! The sellers were an elderly couple and all they end up with is a promise to pay note!

If it is not fraud, then it sure is a deceptive practice.

Needless to say, after discovering all six of these transactions were of the same format, I called the agents to tell them that I could not participate in these closings and they would need to have them transferred elsewhere.

IT WAS A STANDARD FORM 'PURCHASE AND SALE AGREEMENT' OR WAS IT?

A purchase and sale agreement was delivered to our office. The file was set up and the title was ordered. Opening letters went out to the purchaser and seller and the payoff was ordered.

There were no real estate agents, so the closer dealt directly with the purchaser and seller. The closer prepared the closing statements. The seller asked if he could review the closing statement ahead of time. It was emailed to him. He called shortly later and said why did you charge me for the excise tax, title and ½ closing fee? The closer told him that those are customary charges on the boiler plate language of the purchase and sale agreement. He said, are you sure? Of course, the closer said she was sure because this was the MLS form PSA that is always used. The seller said, well, humor me, and check the boiler plate language again.

The closer checked again and sure enough, it said, the purchaser will pay for all the sellers' costs to include the excise tax, owner's title and ½ closing fee. How could that be? She checked the first page where the form number usually was to see what date this particular form was created and there was no number or date, totally gone.

This was a form that someone modified and deleted all the SAR numbers and dates, and changed the boiler plate language as to who pays for what fees!

DECEPTIVE PRACTICES!

The closer completed the closing as the contract stated. When the purchasers called to set up their signing appointment and get the amount they need to bring to the appointment in a cashier's check they were shocked it was so much higher than what their lender quoted. They called their lender and the lender reviewed the settlement statement and asked why were her purchasers being charged for the seller's excise, title and ½ closing fee? The closer told them that the boiler plate language stated so. The lender took a look and said this agreement had been altered, now what do we do?

Here we go again.... the closer had to contact the company attorney and explained what appeared to happen.

He told them that this is a signed around purchase and sale agreement (an altered one at that) and I would need a new agreement or an addendum telling me to make those changes. The seller was contacted and said he was not signing a new agreement nor was he signing an addendum agreeing to pay those charges.

The purchaser really wanted the house and needed to move this week-end so they agreed to pay the additional fees in order to complete the sale.

The seller got away with the altering of the MLS form!
